

Introduction & Map

连云港简介&地图 of LIANYUNGANG

Lianyungang is a port city in northeastern Jiangsu. Huaguo Mountain, a major place featured in novel 'Journey to the West', has picturesque sceneries all year long.

Liandao Island, the largest island in Jiangsu, offers amazing sceneries of mountains, sea, beaches, strangely-shaped stones, fishing villages, and more.

Donghai county in Lianyungang is nicknamed 'the county of rock crystal'; as it contains nearly half of China's rock crystal reserve, while the Donghai hot spring is regarded as 'the best hot spring in East China'.

Noteworthy Mountains 文化名山

Seaborne Yuntai Mountain

Seaborne Yuntai Mountain was used to be an island in the sea, and was latter joint with the mainland between the 18th and 19th Century. Besides hilly topography, there are waterfall, farmyard, villages, coastal promenade and even a cargo port within this tourist hotspot, where you may behold the spectacular views of rolling greens and rippling blues.

Huaguo Mountain

Touted as the real location that the novel 'Journey to the West' was based upon as the origin place of Monkey God, Huaguo Mountain is famous within China and afar. There are several natural scenic spots that inspired the story. Within the undulating hilly terrain of Huaguo Mountain, Yunu Ridge is the highest peak throughout Jiangsu Province with a remarkably height of 624.4m above sea level.

Kongwang Mountain

This mountain is named after Confucius the philosopher who climbed the mountain to behold sea view. Here, the Buddha stone sculpture on the cliff made since the Eastern Han dynasty is the oldest Buddhist stone sculpture ever found in China.
